

Competent Instructional Designers Get Certified

Addresses Sustainability

The competent instructional designer/developer considers the best usage of resources (e.g., staffing, time, money, materials, technologies.) both now and in the future.

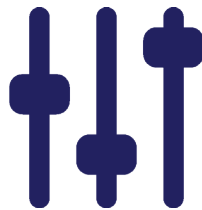

Aligns Solution

The competent instructional designer/developer creates or changes relationships among parts of the solution (internal to the solution) or between the solution and its parent organization or sponsors (external to the solution).

Assesses Performance (during learning)

The competent instructional designer/developer evaluates what the learner does within the learning environment using a specific set of criteria as the measure or standard for the learner's progress.

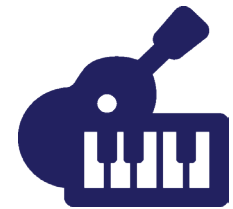

Collaborates and Partners

The competent instructional designer/developer works jointly with sponsors and other members of the solution development team to produce the solution.

Elicits Performance "Practice"

The competent instructional designer/developer ensures that the learning environment and practice opportunities reflect the actual environment in which the performance will occur.

Get Your Evidence-based ID Certification, Today!

Use your current work as evidence of competence.

Engages Learner

The competent instructional designer/developer captures and keeps the participant's attention and interest through active participation, practice opportunities, feedback, and reflection.

Enhances Retention and Transfer

The competent instructional designer/developer ensures that the learning environment creates and measures recall, recognition, and replication of desired outcomes.

Ensures Context Sensitivity

The competent instructional designer/developer considers the conditions and circumstances that are relevant to the learning content, event, process and outcomes.

Ensures Relevance

The competent instructional designer/developer ensures that the learning environment connects the learner to the outcomes through content, activities, and feedback that addresses the learner's background and reflect the work environment.

Apply Now

The competent instructional designer/developer maximizes their professionalism by becoming certified and using their mark and digital badge to promote their talents and their field.

Are you certified?

Visit us at www.tifpi.org

